SOME MORE ABOUT BROADDUS.

Because of the fact that the Telegram is co-operating with some of the prominent Baptist preachers of this section, as well as laymen, and some of the trustees of Broadus Institute in an effort to eliminate from the school disturbing influences, the Harrison County Herald tries to make it appear that there is a paper in this city that is doing Broadus real injury. Now, as we understand it Broadus is a Baptist school and the Baptist are the main ones to decide whether Broadus is being injured by the effort being put forth in this direction. Many prominent Baptists say it is not and they express their hearty approval of what the Telegram has done and think it is the proper course to pursue. They are satisfied Broadus would do far better work and get along much better, if it was freed from the trouble, which even other papers than the Telegram have recognized as existing there. The Herald itself knows the trouble is there but because the Telegram responds the institution's best good that sheet tries to throw cold water on the movement. But that will not make Broadus.

A WORTHY ENTERPRISE.

The first annual exhibition given by the Clarksburg Poultry Association was a decided success and the association is to be congratulated. Neither pains nor expense were spared by the officers and directors to put up a first class show and their efforts were amply rewarded. So great was the interest in this enterprise that the increase in membership was marvelous. The association began with only nine members, but the exhibition ended in a membership of fully sixty and of a class of citizens that guarantees its future. It is now in shape to expand and become a very useful institution. The Telegram is glad to see the names of many farmers on the list of the membership and it is an encouragement to breeders of fowl to have associated with them so many leading business and professional men. The association's work is bound to prove of great profit and it is shown that it is already an institution worthy of support. From the great success this year and the interest manifested there is every assurance that the next annual exhibition will eclipse all such ever given in the state.

So far as the Salem matter is concerned, the News is right, when it says the Telegram favors it, but it is wrong when it says the Telegram wants whiskey sold in Salem. It is up to the people of Salem at the polls, in the event they get a city charter with a whiskey clause in it, to say whether that clause shall be in force or not. If Salem wants licensed saloons, we say let her have them. If Salem does not want them, we say let her not have them. The will of the people should prevail in Salem just as it does every where else. Let this majority rule.

If the News had read the Telegram it would have found out that this paper expressed itself editorially to the effect that the outcome of the water question would be the issuance of bonds, and that seems to be the calculation just now. The News ought to read and learn before it plunges away at something it appears to know so little about.
